

David Hebert
VP, Product Marketing
Intelligent Results

David Hebert is the vice president of product marketing for Intelligent Results, a pioneer in customer analytics and decision management software. In this role, Dave is responsible for product marketing and defining the overall product strategy and roadmap.

Dave brings more than 18 years of product planning and marketing expertise to Intelligent Results. Dave came to Intelligent Results from Microsoft where he was Senior Product Planner for Exchange Server and was most recently responsible for developing new channel engagement models for Microsoft's Communication Sector Hosting Solutions business.

Prior to joining Microsoft, David was director of marketing and group manager for WRQ, the 17th largest software company in the United States that develops, markets, and distributes business software designed to connect PCs to corporate systems, including networks and host systems. While at WRQ, Dave led the marketing team for the Reflection business unit and brought next generation web-enabled host access and PC/UNIX integration products to market.

David earned his Bachelor of Science degree from VanderCook College in Chicago. He also earned master's degrees from the University of Illinois and Lincoln Christian Seminary.
